

Tiami — September 2026 Paid Media Recap

Prepared by: Creekside Marketing Period: September 1–30, 2026

1. Results Summary

	Amount
Meta spend	$3,126.00
Google spend	$8,700.00
Total ad spend	$11,826.00
Purchases tracked (Meta + Google)	10
Blended cost per purchase	$1,182.60

2. How Budget Decisions Were Made

We want to be transparent about why spend landed where it did. Every change in September came from a conversation with your team, and we acted on what we understood your direction to be:

- September 9 — Channel direction. In our meeting and Slack thread, the discussion was to keep Google running and turn Meta off. We followed that: Meta was paused and Google became the main channel.
- September 11 — Brand protection. We discussed the need to protect the Tiami brand in search. That conversation did not mention a $50/day cap, so we kept Google funded enough to hold brand terms and stay competitive.
- September 29 — Performance report. We sent a written Google update showing what we were seeing, including spend and results to date.

What the Slack conversation shows

Wednesday, September 9

Lindsey (Creekside), 12:09 PM: @David W @Tricia Leone after reviewing this my thoughts are to keep branded search for Tiami and turn off meta. $10 a day will not drive the needle at all for us so it would be better to just turn it off.

Tricia Leone, 7:32 PM: @David W Did you see this? Are you aligned on turning spend off completely?

David W, 7:33 PM: Let's confirm tomorrow.

Thursday, September 10

Tricia Leone, 12:55 PM: @Lindsey should we connect quick today on this? or did we already turn it off?

Lindsey (Creekside), 6:00 PM: I turned off meta. What do you want me to do with Google?

Tricia Leone, 6:08 PM: We def need to leave Google on IMO - right @David W?

Friday, September 11

David W, 9:40 AM: Yes. Protecting our brand ... the nuance is that if nobody is bidding for our term and we can get organic search to put us top of the page we don't need it but if we are below the engineering Tiami company ... then we need to protect.

Tricia Leone, 10:01 AM: We've had two orders come from google today 🎉

Lindsey (Creekside), 10:10 AM: Yes!

Across this thread, the direction was to turn off Meta and keep Google on to protect the brand. No daily budget cap for Google was mentioned. We kept Google running based on that direction, with your money and your goals in mind.

Looking back, we can see that a $50/day budget was expected and that it never made it into those conversations in writing. That's a communication gap, and we share responsibility for it. We should have restated the daily budget limit in writing every time we changed channels or campaign goals. The spend was not random. It followed the direction we believed we had, but we know the outcome wasn't what you expected.

3. What We're Changing

We take your budget seriously. Every dollar we spend is your money, and we never want to spend more than you're comfortable with. To make sure that doesn't happen again:

1. Standing budget review in every meeting. We'll go through a shared Budget & Performance Checklist (attached) at every call.
2. Pacing alerts. If any channel is pacing more than 10% over its agreed monthly budget, we'll tell you within 24 hours.
3. Mid-month check-in. On the 15th we'll send a short note with spend to date, projected month-end spend, and purchases.

4. Complimentary Offer: NightArk Site Audit & SEO Fixes

To make up for the miscommunication, we'd like to audit the NightArk website and fix the SEO issues we find, at no cost.

One issue we've already spotted: "Duvet" still shows up in the SEO titles/meta descriptions on many top pages. That's leftover copy that confuses search engines and shoppers and pulls down relevance and click-through rate. The audit would cover:

- Page titles, meta descriptions, and H1s on top pages (removing the old "Duvet" copy)
- Indexing and crawl errors, broken links, redirects
- Page speed and mobile usability
- Product/collection page structure and schema markup
- A prioritized fix list, with the fixes done by our team

5. Next Steps

- Confirm the October budget: daily and monthly cap per channel, in writing
- Pick a time for the first review using the new checklist
- Approve the NightArk audit, and we'll start right away

Thank you for your trust. We're committed to making sure your budget is always used the way you intend.

Appendix: Tiami Recurring Meeting Agenda: Budget & Performance (30 min)

1. Budget check (5 min). Agreed daily/monthly cap per channel, spend to date, projected month-end, and any channel pacing >10% over.
2. Performance review (10 min). Purchases, cost per purchase, and ROAS by channel, compared with last period.
3. Changes since last meeting (5 min). Every pause, launch, or budget change, and confirm each one was approved in writing.
4. Decisions (5 min). Channel on/off, new caps, and priorities. Read back every budget number out loud before the meeting ends.
5. Wrap-up (5 min). After each weekly meeting, Creekside sends a written meeting summary with the budget for each channel, ad spend to date, and decisions made. The client replies “confirmed.”

Use the Budget & Performance Checklist as the live tracker during each call.
